THE best way for the California wine merchants to settle the saki question is to turn to and work for annexation.

THE supposition that the mysterious movements of British war ships portended something serious for China has proved to be well founded. It will be a source of gratification to the whole civilized world that Great Britain has taken positive action to assure protection to the missionary workers of the East. Should this move in the cause of humanity prove to be a screen to gain a selfish end it is certain that China cannot be under a more irresponsible and unsatisfactory Government than the present regime.

If there is one official in the Government whom the people would vote a vacation "on full pay" it is Attorney General Smith. Mr. Smith in his capacity as President of the Board of Health has gained a reputation and a place in the hearts of the community that will not be forgotten in a day. His success has been no sudden flight, no popular stroke of policy made to catch the transient praise of a wavering public. Mr. Smith has shown himself the man for the emergency, when that emergency called for the display of strong executive ability, hard, fearless work, and the complete subjection of all personal interests in a work for the public good.

PRESIDENT POLK AS AN ANNEX- ATIONIST.

James Schouler in an article on President Polk's administration written for the Atlantic Monthly of September gives many interesting incidents of the inside history of the acquisition of Mexican territory by the United States and of the final annexation of Texas.
The facts are culled from President Polk's diary and throw many interesting side lights upon the consummation of a policy that is regarded by many as one of the darkest blots on American history.
President Polk's own writings show him to be, like the head of the present administration, a man who, when he decided upon a mode of action would stop at nothing in carrying it out. Thoroughly loyal to the continuance of the Union of States he saw all too late that his determination to gain new territory, had resulted in an agitation of the slavery question which he feared would destroy "Democratic institutions and perhaps the Union," though he believed that slavery "had no legiti-mate connection with the war into Mexico, being a domestic, not a foreign question."

That President Polk was an ardent annexationist and believed in the United States controlling not only the country between the two oceans, but also all of the natural island outposts is clearly demonstrated. His Mexican campaign was hardly completed before he began to lay plan for the annexation of Cuba. On the 30th of May, 1848, just as a new presidential canvass was opening and before ratifications had been exchanged securing place with Mexico, the President broached his new scheme to his Cabinet.
This body was divided in its opinion but as Cass, the party candidate had declared himself as willing to take his chances upon such an issue, the objecting members of the Cabinet assumed a quiescent attitude and let their chief executive and his supporters go on with their work. Cubans were in insurrection and President Polk thought it a favorable opportunity to help Spain out of its troubles by taking the island off that country's hands. General Quitman, who had proved a hard fighter in the Mexican campaign, volunteered to head a filibustering expedition and see to it that Cuba was turned over to the Republic.

Mr. Polk, however, would not listen to such a plan, but set to work to make a formal offer for the purchase of the island. This offer was made through Minister Saunders at Madrid, the limit of the purchase price being placed at a hundred million dollars. The overture was repulsed, in a few weeks a Whig President was elected and the annexation plans were indefinitely postponed.

Should, as numerous correspondents predict, the annexation of Cuba become a live question during President Cleveland's administration he will find a strong precedent for an aggressive policy in the history of the closing days of President Polk's term of office.

"According to our prediction of a few days ago," as the Bulletin would put it, a filibuster yarn comes from Boston. Undoubtedly this contingent will be a large one, as the itinerary must include a pleasant trip across the continent with a good opportunity to drop off by the way and count railroad ties in getting back to the fair land of bean eaters and the home of John L. Sullivan. Possibly the next story will be to the effect that John L. has been induced to desert his farm and lead the Boston division of the army that is to occupy Hawaii. All that remains to make our prediction complete is for some bright St.
Johns newspaper man to set John Johnson, or some of the Smiths or Joneses, to enlisting Nova Scotia wood choppers, who are disgusted with the cold "snaps" of logging camps and are desirous of taking up their residence in a warmer country flowing with milk and honey.
